While Mr. Green was waiting for a bus one morning a car passed him, going very rapidly. Mr Green just had time to say, "The person is certain to have an accident if...", but before he could finish his sentence there was a crash involving that car and a bus which was passing at that time. There was a terrible noise and a lot of damage was done to both the car and the bus.

Mr. Green hurried to see if anyone had been injured, but everyone was all right. Then the bus driver asked him to accept to act as a witness to the accident and describe it when necessary. Mr Green agreed.

After a few days Mr Green was called to the court. There the judge asked him, "How far were you from the place the accident took place?"

"Eleven meters and forty-five centimeters," Mr Green answered.

The judge was surprised and said, "How do you know it so exactly?"

"Because I was expecting someone like you to ask me," Mr Green answered.
