Passage 1:

People and the sources of air pollution are found in the same places. This means that cities that have large population have the biggest problem of dirty air. Air pollution is caused by many different things. A major source of air pollution is the gas fumes from cars. Statistics show that 93 percent of all auto trips are within cities. Another major source of dirty air is the burning of coal and oil for energy. This energy is needed to make electricity. Of course, much more electricity is used in the city than in the country.

On the average, each American throws away more trash and garbage than he did the year before. Burning garbage contributes to air pollution. Many major industries are also responsible for the dirty air in and around cities. The fumes from iron, steel, chemical, and petroleum production add particles to the air.

The effects of air pollution range from mild headaches to death. The levels of pollution found in heavy traffic may cause headache or loss of clear vision. Wherever coal and oil are used for fuel, fumes may kill trees and plants and metal to corrode. In some of the larger cities, these fumes endanger the lives of human beings by contributing to lung disease and causing early deaths.

Passage 2:

In 1954 the American and Soviet governments announced that they would launch artificial satellites during the International Geophysical Year of 1957 – 58. The Russians were first mistaken about the unmanned satellite Sputnik 1 in October 1957 (Sputnik is Russian for “traveling companion”). Its capsule weighing 83.6 kilograms went into Earth orbit carrying a radio transmitter whose “beeps” (pips) were received on the ground. Sputnik 1 was followed in November 1957 by the much bigger Sputnik 2, which weighed half a ton. It carried the dog Laika, which became the first living creature to orbit the Earth. The first American satellite, Explorer 1, weighed only 14 kilograms. It was launched in January 1958. The Russian probe Luna 1 launched in 1959 flew past the Moon at a distance of about 6000 kilometers. In the same year, the Russians actually hit the Moon with Luna 2, and Luna 3, flew round the Moon and sent back the first photographs of the far side.
