Pre-viewing task

1-What did the fortune cookies say about Skipper's leadership?

2-What does King Julien think about the "Misfortune Cookie"?

3-What does King Julien plan to do to make the penguins believe in the curse?

The image shows the entrance to the Central Park Zoo. A large, square, light-colored stone clock tower stands prominently. The tower has a circular clock face on its front face, with Roman numerals and black hands. On top of the tower is a large, dark, cylindrical bell. Flanking the bell are two bronze statues of monkeys, each holding a mallet as if about to ring the bell. The words "CENTRAL PARK ZOO" are displayed in large, dark, sans-serif capital letters across the front of the tower. Below the text is a decorative metal gate with a repeating geometric pattern. In the background, a city skyline with various skyscrapers is visible under a clear blue sky.
