They leave the truck and go into the office.

Kim and Andy drive to Dover and take the ferry to Calais. They drive off the ferry, and out of Calais! They find the motorway and a big STOP sign.

"We need a ticket" says Andy. He puts his hand out of the window to take the ticket but he is too far away and the ticket goes under the truck. Andy jumps down and goes to get it.

"OK, I've got it now." Andy calls to Kim.
"But the truck is losing oil. Not much, but we must do something about it soon."

"OK," says Kim "I can do that at the truck stop. Come on let's go!"

They arrive at the truck stop near Reims at about one o'clock. Kim gets under the truck.

"You're right," she tells Andy.
"The truck is losing oil. But it isn't very bad." Then suddenly she calls to Andy.
"Come and have a look at this."

There is a box under the truck.

"Is it a sandwich box?" asks Andy. "Perhaps Gary puts his sandwiches in it."

"Under a hot, dirty, oily truck?" says Kim. "Nobody does that! Oh well, I need some coffee." She goes to the cafe.

A close-up photograph of a black plate filled with several pieces of tandoori chicken. The chicken is cooked to a deep red-orange color, with some charred areas on the skin. It is garnished with fresh green herbs, likely cilantro. The chicken is served over a bed of sliced onions. In the background, other dishes are partially visible, including what appears to be a bowl of rice and a small plate of chutney. An orange rectangular box with the word "India" in black serif font is overlaid on the bottom left of the image.
