

Machu Picchu

Machu Picchu is an ancient city high in the Andes mountains of Peru. It was built about 600 years ago. Machu Picchu was famous for its stone buildings and terraces, which were used for farming and religious ceremonies. It is believed to have been a royal estate or a sacred place for the leaders.

The background of the slide features a photograph of a mountain peak, likely part of the Machu Picchu complex, under a clear blue sky. The mountain is covered in green vegetation and is partially obscured by a large blue text box.

The site was abandoned and hidden from the outside world for centuries until it was rediscovered in 1911.

Today Machu Picchu is a UNESCO world heritage site and one of the most visited tourist destinations in the world.

People come from all over the world to hike and explore this ancient wonder. Visitors are amazed by the incredible stonework and the natural beauty of the surrounding mountains.
