Charity shops

Hi, I'm John. I'm a volunteer at a charity shop. I work two mornings a week and I give my time for free. Lots of people donate things to our shop and we sell them to make money for our local hospital. We sell second-hand books, clothes, shoes, toys and many other things. I believe that working or shopping at a charity shop is a great way of supporting your local community and helping others.

My name is Charlotte. I never throw my old books and clothes away! I always give them to my local hospital charity shop. In my opinion, giving things to a charity shop is a great way of recycling items you don't need any more. When I go to the charity shop to donate my things, I often end up buying something too! Sometimes, I buy more than I give! But that's good because all the money raised goes to my local hospital.
