۳ نمره	با توجه به متن زیر به سؤالات پاسخ دهید. Students like different jobs; for example, they may want to be doctors, teachers, policemen, and firefighters in future. Obviously, everyone chooses their job based on their talents and interests. But do you know what sort of job a linguist has? Well, a linguist is someone who has studied linguistics, and linguistics is, in simple terms, the scientific study of language. Linguistics has various sun-fields such as phonetics which investigates all the different sounds that people use to make up words. Another sun-field of linguistics is morphology which is the study of internal structure of words. Also, syntax is the next sun-field that is related to studying how words are combined to make up sentence's. In fact, syntax is very similar to examining the rules of grammar e.g. how sentences need a noun and a verb, and even sometimes an adjective and an adverb to describe the nouns and verbs. There are some other sub-fields of linguistics that study various aspects of human languages. Linguists are certainly interested in language and its features; however, they are not necessarily multi-lingual who can communicate in various languages. In fact, when you introduce yourself as a linguist, uneducated people or laymen may think that you know many languages, but the point is that you have a very special and high knowledge of language and your job is directly related to the role of language in something. As an instance, you may help a judge decide who has originally written a certain text, or you may to decode the ancient languages in historical sites. 1) Who are linguists? (What does a linguist do)? 2) Name some sub-fields of linguistics. (two sub-fields would be enough) True And False 3) linguists must be multi – lingual True <input type="checkbox"/> False <input type="checkbox"/> 4) Syntax is very similar to the rules of grammar.
